UM can suspend student aid

The University of Montana has at its command a federal law that gives it the power to suspend financial aid to any student involved in violent and disruptive demonstrations, Donald J. Mullen, director of financial aids, said Tuesday.

The law, which comes from Section 504 of the Higher Education Amendments of 1968, is soon to be rewritten to state that no court action will be necessary to have these funds revoked, Mullen said.

"As far as the University of Montana is concerned we have never had a disturbance that would fall under this regulation and we don't anticipate any arising," Mullen said.

The law, which is administered by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, states that any person attending or employed by an institution who is convicted by a court of any crime concerning force, disruption or seizure of property under the control of an institution of higher learning is subject to a loss of financial aid for a period of two years.

Financial programs that come under the law are National Defense Loans, educational opportunities grants, The Student Loan Insurance Program, work-study programs and any fellowship program.

'Little Murders' begins tonight

The UM drama department will open its 1970-71 theater season tonight with Jules Feiffer's comedy-satire, "Little Murders."

The play begins at 8:15 in the University Theater and will be performed nightly through Sunday.

The play is about a middle class Manhattan family trying to cope with noises of construction, police sirens, fire engines, mysterious gunshots and anonymous phone calls from the "breather."

Lois Stewart, drama publicity director, said Feiffer has been called the voice of the 1970s because his plays and cartoons cleverly attack the problems that have beset this country.

The play is directed by Robert Ingham, a new faculty member of the drama department.

Playing lead roles in the play are Suzanne Cook, senior in drama; Bill Gillespie, graduate student in drama; Nancy Nichols, senior in drama; David Pichette, junior in drama, and Rick Stokes, senior in drama.

Other members of the cast are Everett Robertson, Paul Haines, Linda Michelin, Cathy Larish, Bruce Olsen, Douglas Stuart, Peggy O'Connell, Debbie Bedard and David Ferguson.

The box office opens daily at noon. Tickets may be reserved by calling 243-4581. Student admission is $1.

Three CB delegates elected

Three on-campus delegates to Central Board were elected yesterday—Tom Mozer, sophomore in chemistry; Gary Parry, freshman in liberal arts, and Connie Enzweiler, sophomore in English.

Randy Gray, chairman of the elections committee, pointed out at last night's CB meeting that there was only a three-vote difference between Enzweiler and Neil Jensen, and a six-point difference between Enzweiler and Patty Kelly. Gray said the candidates may contest the election and ask for a recount.

Tom Mozer	308
Gary Parry	306
Connie Enzweiler	301
Neil Jensen	298
Patty Kelly	295
Phillip Cox	206
Richard Ratigan	190

While campaigning for office, Mozer said he believes the money currently used for interscholastic athletics should be given to Program Council to help hire better entertainment, since only about five per cent of the student body is involved in varsity athletics. He also suggested that ASUM help minority groups fight housing discrimination in Missoula and that the draft counseling service become a full-time program.

Parry said if students band together the Bookstore prices could possibly be lowered.

Enzweiler said students should become "more actively involved" in campus affairs. She said Central Board has the power to determine how students' fees will be spent and CB should use this power.

Cloherty approved as Kaimin editor

By HEIDI GASSER
Montana Kaimin Reporter

Central Board last night unanimously approved the resolution by Publications Commission to accept Jack Cloherty, senior in journalism and current Montana Kaimin sports editor, as Kaimin editor.

Publications Commission interviewed applicants for the position in a 3½-hour meeting yesterday afternoon and selected Cloherty by a majority vote.

The position of Kaimin editor was left open by the Oct. 13 resignation of T. J. Gilles.

Other applicants were Roger Hawthorne, graduate student in journalism; Harmon Henkin, junior in journalism; Scott Anderson, junior in journalism; Bill Vaughn, senior in journalism, who took over the job of editing the Kaimin during Gilles' absence; Howard Pederson, senior in journalism, and T. J. Gilles, senior in journalism, who returned to Missoula Tuesday night.

Cloherty received four of the seven votes cast by the commission. Hawthorne received two and Vaughn one.

Clayton Schenck, chairman of Publications Commission, said the choice was made in the best interest of the student body. Schenck told Central Board that Cloherty was well-liked by the staff, is an excellent writer, and that he conducted the best interview.

Randy Gray, chairman of the elections committee, pointed out there was only a three-vote difference between Enzweiler and Neil Jensen, and a six-vote difference between Enzweiler and Patty Kelly. Gray said the candidates may contest the election.

CB also passed a resolution, presented by Kathy Williams, on-campus delegate, that non-freshmen students be free to determine their own residence and that on-campus residence hall regulations be uniform for all students.

Williams said basic human rights are being overruled with consideration of the University bonding issue. The University requires that women not of senior status and under the age of 21 live in dorms.

A committee was set up to review the situation and possibly take it to the administration.

A resolution was defeated to give the ASUM president full authority and discretion in consulting the legal advice of an attorney on behalf of ASUM.

A fund of $3,000 has been set up for the purpose of legal consultation when necessary, since it is not feasible to hire a full-time attorney, ASUM President Jack Green said. A special meeting of CB will be called should the need to consult a lawyer arise.

A $2,074 allocation to the Selective Service Counseling Center was approved by CB. The appropriation—for salary, phone bills, and summer counseling—equals last year's allocation.

Liquor check set for game

Law enforcement officers will be posted at all gates to check for liquor bottles at next week's homecoming football game, Robert Fedore, dean of students, said yesterday.

Fedore said an injury to a UM cheerleader, Debbie Morgan, at the Weber State football game three weeks ago prompted the administrative action. Morgan was hit by a liquor bottle thrown from the stands and received a cut on her leg.

Sheriff's deputies will likely be asked to watch the gates, but there are no definite plans for a physical search, Fedore said. "Officers will be posted at all gates, not just the student section, for public safety reasons," he said.

Observatory completed

Construction of an astronomical observatory for the physics and astronomy department has been completed on Blue Mountain, south of Missoula.

The small, cement-brick building was erected at a cost of $12,500, according to Tom Margrave, assistant professor of astronomy and physics. Margrave said a $28,500 16-inch telescope has been ordered for the observatory and is expected to arrive near the end of October.

The observatory, constructed by Rolf Tandberg Construction of Missoula, was built on six acres of land leased at no fee from the Forest Service.

Margrave said the observatory would be used primarily for student instruction rather than research because of the limited size of the telescope. He said the location is not exceptional because of frequent cloudiness and that most research work would be done during the less-cloudy summer months.

Built at an elevation of 5,800 feet, the installation was financed by funds from the State of Montana and the National Science Foundation.

The King is dead. Long live the King.

The Kaimin people, though briefly shaken, will continue trying to give you an excellent newspaper four days a week.

A note of introduction: Yesterday Publications Commission appointed me editor. Euphoria. Fear. Excitement. Yesterday I was sports editor, last night eight empty Kaimin pages had to be filled. My name is Jack Cloherty.

I am not of the opinion that editors should be self-proclaimed saviors of the ignorant masses. I feel I am not better or worse than you, although I have my share of ego. I happened to be in the right place at the right time, so I was asked to undress myself daily on these pages. I will not try to tell you what to think. I will try to make you think.

Bill Vaughn and Dan McIntyre will help. They will remain senior editors. Very encouraging. They are highly competent people.

People, all kinds, will be solicited for guest editorials. If you can say it and it's worth saying, we'll print it. If it is not printed, come see us, and we will tell you why.

The Kaimin is a student paper and will bring you campus news first. Associated Press stories will be used only when we feel the news it brings is important to students. Primarily, it will be news relevant to the campus community.

Things here are getting straight. People are beginning again to feel something for their work, their paper. Because of the events of the last two weeks, we have become more sensitive to our readers' wants and needs. There will be some changes. We will try to be more open, less negative and hopefully, more controversial.

We want to serve you, shake you up and down. We want to hear from you. You will be hearing from us. J. Cloherty

'Strawberry Statement' rated good as movie, better as book

"Strawberry Statement" rates an un-clichéd Right On.

"The Strawberry Statement" is a sort of novel-about-writing-about-activism by James Simon Kunen, who was a student at Columbia University and participant in the 1968 student uprising.

It is possibly the best chronicle on youth, college and the phenomenon of student unrest. If it is possible to make a good movie about an excellent book, "The Strawberry Statement" merits a good-try award.

If you've read the "Statement," casually forget about most of it when you go to the flick. If you haven't read it, just remember novels are novels and flicks are flicks and do not confuse a revamped format with an attempt to put the book on the screen, word for dialogue, plot for picture.

Most of the "Statement" was shot in San Francisco. The backdrop is at first peculiarly unconvincing of the scenes expected in a movie of this type, but nevertheless is good, well-used backdrop.

We start out rowing down a stretch of river. The rowing is called "crew" and is the pet pastime of "Simon," the aggregate hero, played passably by Bruce Davidson, whose style has come a long way from his role in the adolescently traumatic "Last Summer." He is a young man purely stoned on life.

The boy-girl aspect of the picture is interesting: boy-meets-girl-down-at-the-sit-in. Kim Darby, also of "Last Summer" vintage, plays the vernal, pensive activist chick in her own commendable fashion.

At first, striking was not so bad. You could brush your teeth in the college president's restroom, ball your chick inconspicuously in the beautiful, tangle-bodied scene of the office sit-in and sneak out for crew the next day to recruit new blood.

The essence of the flick? "Strawberry Statement" is about a reality—change. If that's where you're at, the movie will add another bit of thought to your collection of old buttons, armbands and slogans. If that's where you're not, "Statement" may give you something very human to understand.

Columnist suggests free-wheeling sabbatical

"Go down the alleys people say are blind; voyage to the worlds that people say have already been discovered; another look may make another world."

The Rev. Michael P. Dammer

The University is useful to some persons: those who are postponing their inevitable obligations to accomplishment, those taking a rest before they make any decisions, those sitting on ice till someone dies or retires and a spot opens.

Another type it serves is the kid who made up his mind five years ago about "what he was going to be when he grew up," and has never swayed from his original proclamation of vocation. He knows his curriculum, he sees his graduation date, he is sure of his starting salary, can predict his net worth, his retirement age and is planning to use his memoirs for a thesis.

For the undecided, stimulant-seeking masses that also walk, or rather stalk the campus, college is about as stimulating as an ether-blowing air-conditioning system.

The dramatic polarization in this country is not without precedent and its origins are not all political.

There are many populations in the United States. There is an infant population helplessly dependent on their respective guardians; there is a senile population, also dependent, and frightfully neglected; there is a growing student population, and an even larger working force, grinding gears and teeth, struggling until the time comes when they claim their share of senility.

The deadlines are posted: into grade school by five or six or you're Mortimer Birth Defect; enter high school at the unlucky age of 13 or you're Dan Dumb; off to college by 18 or you're Sam Soldier, and graduated to hold a "decent" job by the old age of 22 or Frank Failure's the name. This ominous overseer with the time sheet is some fool named Sam who thinks he's everybody's uncle. Sam's program met much opposition in the sixties and he had to use disciplinary measures against some of his more reluctant employees, but why should he hire and fire us at will?

For some, college comes too soon. It does not matter if a youngster was the valedictorian or the slowest kid in the class, he should have an alternative besides the military. I mean a real alternative—a time of complete freedom in the supposed land of the free, and a chance to be truly bold in the home of the brave.

Wouldn't it be nice that if at 18 or 19 years of age, with the blessings of your parents, teachers, and society, you just took off for a couple of years. Not only should you be allowed to go, but expected to; it would be considered a part of growing up.

It could be sponsored by the University. A person could find things out for himself as he traveled, record them at random and maybe get college credit for it. Actually, the work of art we would then be creating would be ourselves.

There is really no time for a conscientious but mediocre student to center his life around grades every minute for four years. Some could say he's sacrificing those four years for golden tomorrows, but who's to say that your 45th year should be any more gratifying or golden than your 19th? Right now 21 is the only age I can be, it's got its good and bad points and I can't see using it only as a preface while my future years become more and more important chapters. They're all equally pertinent pages in the "Me" book I'm constantly unconsciously writing.

Cleaver says 'Miss Dohrn' has joined him in Algiers

ALGIERS (AP)—Black Panther leader Eldridge Cleaver said yesterday a "Miss Dohrn" had joined him and Timothy Leary in exile here but refused to say if she was Bernardine Dohrn, the student radical on the FBI's list of 10 most wanted persons.

He said he would explain everything at a news conference but would not say whether the Miss Dohrn was Bernardine or—as reports outside Algeria said—her sister Jennifer.

A newsman talking to Cleaver by telephone yesterday understood him to refer to Bernardine Dohrn. But when he was contacted later, Cleaver said: "I talked about Miss Dohrn. Everything will be explained at the press conference."

In the first conversation Cleaver had spoken of the flight to Algiers of "Miss Dohrn" as "a blow to American imperialism" and as showing FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover and his organization "as the paper tigers they are."

Rumors had been circulating for several days that Bernardine

Dohrn, 28, who replaced Black Panther militant Angela Davis on the FBI list after Miss Davis was arrested last week, had arrived in Algiers.

The official Algerian news agency announced Tuesday that Leary, who escaped last month from jail in San Luis Obispo, Calif., had arrived here and the Algerian government had granted him political asylum. Leary was serving a term on a narcotics conviction.

Cleaver said details of the flight to Algeria by Leary and his wife Rosemary, who arrived Saturday, also would be revealed at the news conference.

Bernardine Dohrn joined the FBI's 10 most wanted list for alleged "interstate flight, mob action, riot and conspiracy" the day after Angela Davis was arrested in a New York motel.

The FBI has been searching for Miss Dohrn for the last 10 months.

She is charged in the United States with conspiracy. There also is a charge against her in Chicago for street rioting.

She is a national officer of the Weatherman.

Dohrn has been named in an indictment returned July 23 by a federal grand jury in Detroit charging that from last Dec. 27, the occasion of a Weatherman meeting in Flint, Mich., until July 23, she and other defendants conspired to commit bombings in Chicago, New York, Detroit and Berkeley, Calif., and to establish small cells or units to bomb and destroy police stations and other civic business and educational buildings.

Her name also appeared on a message from the Weatherman Underground, postmarked Los Angeles, claiming that the group had engineered Leary's escape on Sept. 13.

From hiding, she sent a stream of tape-recorded and written messages promoting the cause of the Weatherman. One recording recently had her predict that "revolution would spread from coast to coast."

Kent State student president calls for Civil Liberties Day

Kent State student body president Craig Morgan has called for a nationwide, non-violent Civil Liberties Day for tomorrow, the New York Times News Service reported yesterday.

Today Morgan clarified his call for a day of concern over vanishing civil liberties in America. In a prepared statement, Morgan asked that classes be attended as usual on campuses across the nation. He requested that noon rallies and workshops be scheduled throughout the day so that they would not interfere with classes.

Morgan's call follows his indictment by a special state grand jury on a second degree riot incitement charge for his presence in a crowd of students last May 4, when Ohio National Guardsmen fired upon Kent State students. Four students were killed and nine others wounded.

The state grand jury has also exonerated the Guard on the grounds that guns were fired in self defense. The FBI and the President's Commission on Campus Unrest reported no justification for Guardsmen firing upon the crowd. Morgan is an Air Force ROTC cadet and proponent of non-violence, the Times service reported. He was arrested on the riot incitement charge in his student government office.

Morgan's statement emphasized the need for non-violent activities tomorrow. He said Americans must be educated about civil liberties and rights. His statement was released in protest of the grand jury's exoneration of the National Guard and what he said was the secrecy of issuing the grand jury indictments. As in his case, the statement said, names of those indicted will not be known until actually arrested.

Women's Lib slates meeting

The Missoula Women's Liberation will discuss at an open meeting tonight a resolution passed by Central Board last night.

Central Board resolved that all non-freshman students should be free to determine their own place of residence and that campus residence halls have uniform regulations.

The meeting will be held at 7 p.m. in UC 360ABC.

Rocky Mountaineers promote outdoors

By NORMA TIRRELL
Montana Kaimin Reporter

Two members of the Rocky Mountaineers of Western Montana say that UM buildings are definitely more than the classrooms which they contain. They are mountains to be conquered.

The two Mountaineers, Wally Beebe and Pat Pauli, both sophomores with undecided majors, say the Psychology Building has a good chimney for climbing. They rate the Music Building as an "easy climb."

The two said climbing the buildings was a way to hone their mountaineering skills.

of this group made many of the first ascents of western Montana mountains in the 1920's and 30's. The Montana Mountaineers broke up shortly after World War II.

In 1959 a Missoula man, Thad Lowary, who worked with the Forest Service, was told that a young Indian boy was lost in the Mission Mountains. With only on-the-job instruction, Lowary rescued the youth.

A tribute written by Rocky Mountaineer Dave Line to Lowary, who died last year, said that this rescue caused Lowary to realize the need for a competent search and rescue team for the increasing tain rescue work. Soon, however, other persons heard about the club and wanted to join and expand its scope to a general outing group.

The Mountaineers have since expanded their interests to appeal to hikers, canoeists, technical rock climbers, ski tourers, bicyclists, backpackers, spelunkers, river floaters, conservationists and anyone else who enjoys being outside.

Last June some of the Mountaineers make a bike tour around Lake Coeur d'Alene. The bicycle enthusiasts in the club also take shorter trips, usually every Sunday, when the weather permits.

During the winter months, the group organizes snowshoeing and ski-touring trips which often are week-long, cross-country outings through Glacier National Park.

"Hiking and backpacking are probably the most popular activities of the Mountaineers today," said Myers. "The club is generally geared toward that interest."

The club's membership fluctuates between 50 and 100 townspeople, UM students, high school students and children. The activities of the club seem to appeal particularly to families.

Although the Rocky Mountaineers are an official campus organization sponsored by George Heller, professor of economics, Myers said the group has better luck meeting off-campus. In addition to improved overall participation, the presence of interested townspeople provides greater continuity in the membership of the club, he explained.

Although a mountaineering club generally implies a skilled activity, Virginia Vincent, editor of the club's newsletter, stressed that membership is open to all who are interested in general outdoor activity.

"The idea of technical climbing scares a lot of people off," she said. "We really urge the average person to be interested in our group because we try to plan activities that any person could participate in."

Outings are arranged formally at meetings and informally by individual members.

"New-comers will find that the 'old hands' will be glad to take them along and show them the ropes," Vincent said.

In addition to its many outings, the Mountaineers sponsor a climbing school each spring for members who are interested in learning the skills required for technical rock climbing.

Last spring's school, organized by Keith Yale, assistant professor of mathematics, and Al Day, an active Mountaineer, consisted of six Sunday sessions for beginning rock climbers. Most of the sessions were held in the Kootenai Creek drainage in the Bitterroot Mountains.

During last spring's school, which was in April and May, about 20 students learned basic skills in knot-tying, climbing hardware, safety and techniques of climbing.

Yale explained in an interview that appeared May 22 in The Missoulian, the biggest problem faced by new climbers is gaining confidence in their ability and in the equipment they use.

A long-term project of the Mountaineers is a tour guide to the Bitterroot and Mission mountains.

According to the Mountain Ear, the club's newsletter, the project's initial goal is to write a brief guide that will be useful to hikers, backpackers and mountaineers. The eventual aim is to produce a comprehensive climbing guide to the area.

Vincent, who is organizing the tour guide, said there are many good trails in the area, but most people can never find them.

Several attempts have been made in the past few years to compile such a guide, but have failed because of dissension among the Mountaineers over the possible effects of a tour guide, Vincent said. Some members contend that a detailed guide might result in more than a desirable number of persons coming into Montana's wilderness areas.

Vincent, on the other hand, believes that tourists and visitors are number of persons exploring high mountain areas near Missoula.

Lowary's work on this plan resulted in the formation of the Rocky Mountaineers in 1960 and, later, the mountain unit of the Missoula County Search and Rescue Association.

The 1960 club, which consisted of three members, was organized for the exclusive purpose of moun-

Winter rescue

More conventional activities of the Rocky Mountaineers range from technical rock climbing to ski touring and kayaking.

Williams Myers, professor of mathematics and president of the club, said, "Our main purpose is enjoyment of an active involvement in the outdoors."

In 1922 a group similar to the Rocky Mountaineers, called the Montana Mountaineers, was organized in Missoula. With a particular interest in the Bitterroot and Mission mountains, members not a threat, but instead a reality. "And as long as they are already here, a guide would serve to spread them out into the 50 possible hiking trails in the Bitterroot and Mission ranges," she said.

The Mountaineers provide a rescue group, available 24 hours a day, for rescues anywhere in Western Montana.

The Mountaineers meet once a month to exchange information, hear speakers and discussions, and gain technical instruction.

Slide shows are presented at meetings by individual members to reveal newly-discovered areas or to emphasize outdoor activities available in this area.

Myers said the meetings generally serve as a clearing house—a place to exchange information and to organize smaller, private outings.

The club has become politically involved, upon occasion, in state lobbying activities. On Sept. 9 the Rocky Mountaineers presented a statement at a hearing in Kalispell in favor of a proposal by the U.S. Forest Service to reclassify the Mission Mountains as a wilderness area.

Reclassification of the Missions is already under consideration, but there are several possible alternatives, including that of multiple use, Myers explained.

"It is our hope and belief that the Missions will become a wilderness area and, therefore, be protected in the future," he said.

The Rocky Mountaineers are an independent local group and not a chapter of a larger, national organization.

The club is a member of Western Outdoor Clubs of America, whose membership varies from very active alpine groups to small outing clubs.

The Mountaineers provided leaders to assist with outdoor activities planned by the Western Outdoor Clubs for their 1970 annual conference, which was held at UM last August. About 250 delegates from Western clubs attended.

The Mountaineers are also loosely affiliated with the Montana Wilderness Association, a state program designed to make Montanans aware of their environment.

The Association sponsors from 30 to 40 hikes and outings each summer. Members of the Rocky Mountaineers are frequently called upon to lead these hikes.

The outings cover all degrees of skill. Myers said that most of the hikes are relatively easy, such as past excursions to Squaw Peak and to Lolo Peak. Backpacking trips into the Bitterroot and Mission Mountains appeal to the more experienced mountaineers.

Many Rocky Mountaineers say the restrictions imposed by closely organized activity contradict total enjoyment of the outdoors.

"We are still pretty small," Myers said. "We simply do not want to become too organized."

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP)—Irene clasped a finely beaded crucifix around her neck.

She drew blue shadows across her eyelids and rouge across her pale cheeks. Then she hitched up her stockings and went to work.

In her purse the striking redhead carried the name and room number of a client. She walked quickly on Pacific Avenue a few blocks to a hotel on the Boardwalk, nodded to the clerk behind the front desk and rode the elevator up one floor.

Upstairs, Irene matched a room to the number on the piece of paper and knocked on the door.

It was her first sale this trip. Her product is herself.

Irene is a top-of-the-line prostitute who specializes in soliciting at conventions.

"Usually I work in hospitality suites set up by exhibitors or associations in hotels," she said in an interview.

"I just walk in and look like I belong. Pretty soon somebody comes over and we start up a conversation.

"Three-fourths of the girls ruin their kidneys by hustling conventioners in bars. They don't have any discretion. They make $40 a night and think they're doing fine. I couldn't have any respect for myself if I sat on a bar stool. And I'm nothing if I don't have respect for myself."

The 21-year-old prostitute never haggles over prices. The amount is fixed. Her time is valuable in Atlantic City or in other top convention towns laced with strangers looking for a good time.

Irene was introduced to Atlantic City nightlife by an offer to work for a madame.

"The house offered me $1,500 to come here," she said.

"If a girl has any sense, she'll want a guarantee to work in a house. I'm not going to travel here just for the holiday.

"It isn't hard for us freelancing prostitutes to find out where the conventions are.

"We can call convention bureaus in the big cities or read the lists in the newspapers. Bartenders know who's in town. The word gets around."

In order to make money in the business, Irene said, you have to look like money.

"I've seen girls work in blue jeans and torn shoes or with dirty faces and stringy hair. You can be a pig or a slob about it, or you can show class. Every woman on the street is our competition.

I want to make money, so I always appear dressed up," she said.

"Occasionally I run into a bellhop, a hotel clerk or a cab driver who refers tricks to me sort of on a commission basis. If they're lucky, I give them $5 on a $30 trick.

"The price of a trick isn't always the same," she said. "He may want to spend a whole lot of time with you and maybe show you off. That costs him plenty. Or he may just want to go up to his hotel room for awhile. Then it's a flat rate.

"I took a time date once and made $350 a day for a week. I warned the guy 'You realize that you're paying for my time.'"

High-scoring tilts foreseen

By HERSCHEL NISSENSEN
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — If you're a lover of offensive football, hop aboard the next jet for Los Angeles; Eugene, Ore.; Colorado Springs, Colo., or El Paso, Tex.

This weekend's college football schedule lists four games which should be enough to satisfy anyone who likes to see the football move up and down the field. They are Stanford at UCLA, Southern California at Oregon, Boston College at Air Force and Arizona State at Texas-El Paso.

Last week's picks came out 39 right, 18 wrong for .667. The season's record is 254-106-4 for .701.

Stanford at UCLA: The Indians, with all-time total offense leader Jim Plunkett, rank seventh nationally in that category and second in passing offense, while UCLA is fourteenth and ninth, respectively, with Dennis Dummit at the controls. It should be close, but Stanford smells those roses.

Southern Cal at Oregon: The Trojans, with their great running backs, are third in total offense and seventh in rushing. Oregon, despite an injury to quarterback Tom Blanchard, ranks first in passing with 308.7 yards a game thanks to the combined efforts of Blanchard and sophomore Dan Fouts.

Trojans can be had, but their offense is about due to erupt again.

Southern Cal. Boston College at Air Force: Falcons are fifth in total offense and fourth in passing with Bob Parker. Eagles are tenth over-all and thirteenth rushing, but Air Force also is eighth best against the rush. Air Force.

Arizona State at Texas-El Paso: Now hear this, statistics lovers: State is second in total offense, eighth in rushing, eleventh in passing, twelfth in total defense and sixth in rushing defense. The miners, thank to Bill Craig's 507 passing yards last weekend, rank third in passing, thirteenth over-all. Not enough. Arizona State.

Louisiana State at Auburn: The Tigers are fourth in total offense, fifth in passing to LSU's seventh in over-all defense and tops against the run, so it should be interesting. Winner will remain unbeaten in the Southeastern Conference and Auburn remembers last year's heart-breaking 21-20 defeat. Auburn.

Florida at Tennessee: Doug Dickey, who coaches at Florida, was at the helm of Tennessee in last season's 14-13 Gator Bowl loss. That was only the second time in 13 meetings Florida managed to beat the Vols and things should be back to normal. Tennessee.

Miami, Fla. at Pitt: Rebounding Panthers were voted tops in the East after that fantastic 36-35 comeback victory over West Virginia, in which they wiped out a 35-8 halftime deficit. How can there be a letdown after that?

Colorado at Missouri: The Tigers bounce back from losses to Notre Dame last week and Colorado last season. Missouri.

Southern Mississippi at Mississippi State: Southerners come back to earth after their shocking upset at Ole Miss. Mississippi State.

Kansas State at Oklahoma: The Wildcats are on probation and the Sooners are unbeaten in Big Eight play. Oklahoma.

Other games:

East-Penn State over Army, Colgate over Brown, Columbia over Rutgers, Yale over Cornell, Dartmouth over Harvard, Princeton over Navy, Villanova over Holy Cross, West Virginia over Colorado State.

South—Mississippi over Vanderbilt, The Citadel over VMI, Duke over Clemson, Georgia Tech over Tulane, Georgia over Kentucky, Western Michigan over Marshall, Maryland over North Carolina State, Richmond over East Carolina, South Carolina over Florida State, Tampa over Xavier, Virginia over William & Mary, Virginia Tech over Buffalo, North Carolina over Wake Forest, Wofford over Davidson.

Midwest—Ohio State over Illinois, Nebraska over Oklahoma State, Michigan over Minnesota, Toledo over Kent State, Dayton over Akron, Ball State over Northern Illinois, Cincinnati over Ohio U., Indiana over Wisconsin, Kansas over Iowa State, Miami over Bowling Green, Michigan State over Purdue.

Southwest—Texas over Rice, Arkansas over Wichita State, Houston over Alabama, Texas A&M over Baylor, Memphis State over North Texas State, Texas Tech over Southern Methodist, New Mexico State over West Texas State.

Far West—Utah State over Brigham Young, California over Washington State, Idaho over Portland State, Oregon State over Washington, Pacific over San Jose State, Arizona over Utah, New Mexico over Wyoming.

Tips lead conference in overall team stats

By JACK TANNER
Montana Kaimin Reporter

The University of Montana Grizzlies lead in six team categories and two individual categories, according to the latest Big Sky Conference statistics.

The Grizzlies lead in total offense with a 447 yard a game average; in rush offense with a 390 yard game average and 2027 total yards; in total defense, allowing opponents a 258 yards a per game average, and in rush defense, giving up only 72 yards a game on the ground.

Individual Big Sky leaders for the Grizzlies are Arnie Blancas, leading in rushing with 619 yards, and Karl Stein, leading in interceptions with six.

The Grizzlies rank sixth in pass offense averaging 102 yards a game, and fifth in pass defense, allowing opponents 175 yards a game through the air.

Idaho State quarterback Jerry Dunne has taken over statistics in passing and total offense in the conference, passing for 782 yards and eight touchdowns, and rolling up 1,101 yards in total offense for the Bengals.

Idaho receiver Joe Moreland is leading in pass receptions with 32, and Idaho State flanker Carlis Harris leads in touchdown receptions with six.

The top scorer in the conference is Weber State fullback Jack Brown with 68 points on 11 touchdowns and one two-point conversion.

Comparing this year's Grizzlies with last year's 10-0 team, last year's team leads in total offense for six games with 2,837 total yards for a 472 game average. This year the Grizzlies have 2,683 total yards for a 447 yard average.

This year's defense has been stingier, allowing opponents 72 yards rushing and 175 yards passing, compared with 104 yards on the ground and 189 through the air last season.

Last season after six games the Tips had scored 207 points and kept opponents to only 99. This year the Grizzlies have put 195 points on the scoreboard and allowed opponents 102 points.

The 1970 Grizzlies have rushed for 2,070 yards and a 390 yard per game average, while the 1969 team had 2,014 total rushing yards for a 335 yard average.

In passing, the 1969 team had a 137 yard a game average and 823 total yards and the current Tip team has 613 passing yards for a 102 yard per game average.

Halfback Arnie Blancas is ahead of his total rushing mark for last year by 72 yards. This year he has rushed for 619 yards, and last year at this time he had 547 yards.

Safety Karl Stein is two behind his last year's interception mark, having intercepted eight after six games last year. He has six interceptions this year.

Grizzly booters lose two

The University of Montana soccer team dropped a pair of matches last weekend, losing to Gonzaga 5-1, and to Washington State 3-2.

Gonzaga shot out 46 an early lead, scoring four of its five goals in the first half. The lone Grizzly goal was scored by forward Bela Balogh.

Washington State scored two goals in the first half and added one in the second half to stop the Grizzlies 3-2.

The Montana soccer team is now 3-2-1 for the season.

The Grizzlies travel to Canada to meet Notre Dame of British Columbia Saturday, and Selkirk College Sunday.

CASEY REILLY

Player Profiles

Reilly best Grizzly blocker

Junior halfback Casey Reilly, at 5 foot 10 and 190 pounds, doesn't have outstanding speed or moves, but he's been starting for the Grizzlies for two years.

What he does have, Coach Jack Swarouth said, is great desire and a winning attitude.

"Even without blazing speed, Casey gets the job done," Swarouth said. "He is a hard runner and a tremendous blocker, and he always comes through for us when we need him," he said.

Reilly came to the University from Anaconda where he was an All-State and All-Conference football selection for two years. He also was a member of the All-Conference basketball team and placed fifth in the state track meet in the low hurdles.

Reilly said he decided to come to UM because he wanted to stay in the state to play football. He said he had offers from other Big Sky schools.

Coach Swarouth said that Reilly is the best blocking back on the team.

"He always knows who to get and how to get him," Swarouth said.

Reilly has missed two games this season with a broken hand, but still ranks sixth in team rushing, having carried 36 times for 141 yards and a 4.4 yard per carry average.

"Casey is a dependable runner in that he can always find some way to get to the goal line," Swarouth said. "We can almost always count on him to score if we get inside the 20 yard line."

Reilly has scored 18 points in the four games he's played this season.

"He doesn't have all the moves that some of the other backs have," Swarouth said, "but he makes up for it by running harder than most backs."

Reilly said he thinks this year's team is better than last year's 10-0 team.

"We might have been a little tougher last year, but I don't think so," he said. "I think this year we are a more physically and mentally complete team. We haven't had any big injuries and that really helps."

Reilly says his sophomore season was his most memorable.

"Last year would have to be my biggest thrill," Reilly said. "If we go undefeated this season, and I think we will, it can't match the feeling I had last year, going undefeated and playing college ball for the first time."

In the off season, Reilly said he hunts and fishes all over Montana.

"That's one of the reasons I wanted to stay in Montana," he said. "I really love to hunt, and I can't think of a better place than Montana."

Reilly is a junior majoring in history and political science. He hasn't made any plans beyond graduation.

Chargers eye trade of Alworth, Hadl

NEW YORK (AP)—Lance Alworth of the San Diego Chargers, a three-time receiving champion with a string of seven consecutive 1,000-yard seasons, reportedly is being mentioned in trade talk as pro football's trading deadline approaches.

The trading deadline for all 26 teams is 4 p.m. EDT, next Tuesday, and if rumors emanating from the West Coast are correct the 6-foot, 180-pound wide receiver might be in a different uniform by then.

Prior reports from San Diego indicated that quarterback John Hadl might be available for the right price, but this is the first time that Alworth's name has been mentioned.

Alworth has taken a back seat to teammate Gary Garrison this year after joining the Chargers late following a contract dispute. While Garrison ranks fourth among American Conference receivers with 20 receptions for 395 yards and five touchdowns, Alworth has caught only eight passes for 139 yards and one score.

If the Chargers were to dispense with the services of Alworth, who has been with the club since 1962, his likely replacement would be Walker Gillette, a number one draft choice from Richmond.

Hadl's name also has been mentioned prominently in trade talk and there are several clubs who might be looking for signal-callers before the trade deadline comes down, including the New York Jets and Houston.

The Jets, with Joe Namath possibly lost for the remainder of the season, are down to sophomore Al Woodall and taxi-squadder Bob Davis.

The Oilers have lost the services of number one quarterback Charley Johnson and are relying on Jerry Rhome.

There have been 75 trades completed since the end of the 1969 season so far, 22 of the inter-conference variety, 25 between AFC teams and 28 between NFC teams. Any trade completed now, however, would have to be within one conference.

Pastors propose peace fast

Fasting in observance of National Peace Day, Oct. 31, has been proposed by campus pastors as a way UM students can participate in a promotion for peace.

Campus pastors William Kliber, Jon Nelson and David Van Dyck proposed student participation in the fast by not buying meals and donating money intended for meals to UNICEF.

The Lutheran Center, 532 University Ave., will open at 8 p.m. on Peace Day to persons participating in the fast.

"At that time we will work out a liturgical form to express our concern for peace," the Rev. Kliber said.

"There will be no big push for placards, demonstrations and marches," he said. "We feel that an observance of peace should be more of an individual thing."

Any expression of violence, whether it be war or a hostile demonstration against war, is a direct contradiction of peace, he said.

The Rev. Kliber said the purpose of the fast is "to internalize within ourselves a self-conscious awareness of the need for peace in our times."
